23 ALSO PRESENT: KRISTIN ALLAIN, FBI Special Agent

JOHN MOSCATO, Pretrial Services Officer

N8B8BANA

1 (In open court; case called)

2 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Government, are you ready?

3 MS. SASSOON: Yes. Good afternoon, your Honor.

4 Danielle Sassoon, Nick Roos, Sam Raymond, Thane Rehn, and

5 Danielle Kudla for the United States. We are joined by Special

6 Agent Kristin Allain of the FBI and John Moscato from 7 probation.

8 THE COURT: Good afternoon.

9 THE DEPUTY CLERK: Defendant, are you ready?

10 MR. COHEN: Yes. Good afternoon, your Honor. Mark

11 Cohen for Mr. Bankman-Fried.

12 MR. EVERDELL: Good afternoon, your Honor. Christian

13 Everdell for Mr. Bankman-Fried.

14 THE COURT: Good afternoon.

15 Now, I do appreciate everybody coming in on the least

16 popular schedule that I could conceivably have devised, but it

17 was necessary for a variety of reasons, and I gather I am not 18 the only one doing this at the moment.

19 Ms. Sassoon.

20 MS. SASSOON: Yes, your Honor. And I have my code

21 book today.

22 THE COURT: Well done.

23 MS. SASSOON: Your Honor, I stood before you recently

24 and you now have the benefit of two letters from the 25 government, and so you have our view of the seriousness of the

N8B8BANA

1 conduct here, as well as what we believe it shows about the 2 defendant's deliberate evasions of his bail conditions and why 3 these facts warrant detention.

4 But Just as a brief recap, we have previously homed in 5 on what the undisputed facts are here, and I will just recap 6 them briefly:

7 The Signal message to the FTX US general counsel, 8 after the defendant was arrested, that referred to being 9 resources for each other and vetting information.

10 The use of a VPN that concealed the defendant's 11 internet activity.

12 THE COURT: Just pause on that one for a minute.

13 How is that exactly an evasion of the bail conditions?
14 I understand that he was evading his contractual obligations
15 and duty of candor to the vendor, but focus on the bail
16 conditions.

17 MS. SASSOON: Yes, your Honor.

18 At the time that had happened, the Court had been 19 notified about what the government considered the improper 20 contact with Witness-1, and the parties were in the process of 21 designing a set of conditions that would allow the government 22 to monitor the defendant's internet activity and phone 23 activity. And although those conditions had not been 24 solidified, the purpose of those conditions was plain, the 25 Court's interest in those conditions was plain, and while that

N8B8BANA

1 was ongoing, the defendant did something that was contrary to 2 that objective, which was concealing what he was doing on the 3 internet, after concerns had been raised about using a device 4 to tamper with a witness.

5 THE COURT: Thank you. Go ahead.

6 MS. SASSOON: I will just note that that is one
7 example where there was a red flag, but there was also a limit
8 to what the government can ultimately know about how the VPN 9 was used.

10 So, certainly a VPN is capable of being exploited to 11 do certain things on the internet that would be problematic, 12 but the use of the VPN itself prevents the government from 13 knowing exactly what the defendant was doing, which in our view 14 is an ongoing problem here with the existing bail conditions.

15 Then more recently you have the secretive sharing of 16 information about Caroline Ellison, including her writings, in 17 a fashion that was difficult to detect and that evaded 18 detection through the monitoring that had been put in place on 19 the defendant's e-mail and phone.

20 And this activity was part of what the defense 21 concedes was an ongoing media strategy to influence the public 22 and potential jurors', effectively, views of the case.

23 THE COURT: He has got a right to try to influence the 24 public up to a point, right?

25 MS. SASSOON: Yes. And nobody disputes that, and we

N8B8BANA

1 have emphasized that in court and in our papers. We don't view
2 this as a First Amendment issue given the means by which the 3 defendant tried to do this, which we consider amounting to 4 witness intimidation and tampering.

5 THE COURT: So the line, if I understand you
6 correctly, is where the intent, in whole or in part, is to 7 influence, intimidate, or various other things a witness, yes?

8 MS. SASSOON: I think it's the intent, and I think 9 that intent is clear here. But I also think the substance of 10 the communication matters too. If he came out and said, I'm 11 innocent or I dispute the allegations in the indictment, that's 12 one type of communication. Whereas, if the substance of the 13 communication can only be understood as trying to influence the 14 public's opinion by discrediting and harassing a witness, 15 that's both part of the witness intimidation, but also part of 16 what the rules, in governing the conduct of the attorneys at 17 the very least, consider tainting the jury and making improper
18 communication.

19 THE COURT: The conduct informs one's view of the 20 intent, that is, the substance of the communication, right?

21 MS. SASSOON: Yes.

22 In our view, the defense has not really engaged with 23 their view of what the least restrictive conditions should be 24 if the Court accepts the government's view of the evidence.
25 They have raised concerns about discovery access in the event

N8B8BANA

1 that the defendant is detained. We have spoken to a number of 2 facilities, in light of the concerns that have been raised, and 3 Putnam County Correctional Facility has represented to us that 4 in the event the defendant were detained and designated to that 5 facility, they would permit the defendant to have a laptop that 6 is enabled for internet-based discovery review, which I think 7 would largely address the concerns raised by the defense.

8 Again, that's in the event that the defendant is 9 detained. If that were to happen, that laptop would still 10 require some time to prepare, but it is feasible and the 11 facility is willing to accommodate that.

12 THE COURT: How much time?

13 MS. SASSOON: I would estimate about a week.

14 THE COURT: Okay. How do you avoid, if he were 15 designated to Putnam CF, use of the internet for purposes other 16 than trial prep, or are we getting right back to where we 17 started months ago?

18 MS. SASSOON: The goal would be to implement features 19 similar to the laptop that the defendant currently is able to 20 use -- namely, one that would only permit access to the 21 defense's Relativity database and to the AWS database.

22 THE COURT: Okay. Go on, please.

23 MS. SASSOON: Your Honor asked the parties to come 24 prepared not only to address the possibility of detention, but 25 also alternatives to detention. And as I mentioned, the

N8B8BANA

1 defense, in our view, hasn't posited less restrictive 2 conditions that would be adequate here if you accept our 3 understanding of the evidence. And the existing conditions, in 4 our view, are not adequate, and those followed extensive 5 negotiations between the parties to design conditions meant to 6 be tight, in fact. And we don't think that the order governing 7 extrajudicial statements alone is sufficient, given what your 8 Honor noted about the difficulty of enforcing such an order, 9 and therefore the potential for abuse by a defendant who, like 10 this one, would be intent on evading his bail conditions.

11 It's also a challenge here to design appropriate 12 pretrial conditions for a defendant who, in our view, has 13 intentionally found ways around what were already carefully 14 designed conditions. And I would point out specifically how 15 the defense requested access to Google Drive, claiming that 16 that was necessary for defense preparation, and that was the 17 tool used to find these documents that were provided to the New 18 York Times.

19 We put in monitoring --

20 THE COURT: You say to find these documents?

21 MS. SASSOON: Yes.

22 THE COURT: Do we know anything about how they were 23 stored, who was supposed to have access, whether these were 24 files that he had personal access to for appropriate reasons?
25 What's the story, if we know?

N8B8BANA

1 MS. SASSOON: My understanding is that they came from 2 his own personal Google Drive account. But I noted in our most 3 recent letter we asked the defense to provide versions of the 4 documents that were not in PDF format, that would include 5 metadata in the original format of the documents, and those 6 have not been provided to the government.

7 I would also note that the final bail order included
8 monitoring of the defendant's phone and of his Google account.
9 And so here the defendant shared the documents in person, which 10 I see no other purpose for that than to avoid an electronic 11 trail of forwarding these documents, which I also think bears 12 on the intent.

13 THE COURT: My recollection is that he invited the 14 reporter to visit him, yes?

15 MS. SASSOON: Yes.

16 THE COURT: Where was the reporter coming from and 17 going to for the purpose of that visit?

18 MS. SASSOON: So the reporter visited him at his 19 residence.

21 MS. SASSOON: Yes.

22 THE COURT: Is the reporter normally based in New 23 York?

24 MS. SASSOON: I don't know the answer to that.

25 I would also note that the parties took pains to

N8B8BANA

1 design a set of conditions to restrict the defendant's behavior
2 in his residence in California. The defendant is increasingly 3 traveling to New York for conferences, and presumably for trial 4 preparation, and that is a gap in the conditions because he is 5 effectively unsupervised when he is here.

6 So, in the event that the Court is considering 7 additional restrictions short of detention, at the very least 8 the government thinks that home incarceration would be 9 appropriate, no visitors, no internet, except to access the 10 database, the discovery database, and to conduct attorney Zoom 11 meetings, and no access to the Google Drive. And I think that 12 that access is addressed by the fact that the government has 13 produced materials from Google in discovery, and although the 14 defendant already had access to his personal Google Drive to 15 date, the government will be producing shortly its own 16 production of those materials, which -- this was noted in our 17 letter -- were inadvertently not produced by Google in their 18 initial search warrant return.

19 I am happy to address any other questions the Court 20 has about our letter or the evidence.

21 THE COURT: Thank you.

22 Mr. Cohen.

23 MR. COHEN: Thank you, your Honor.

24 THE COURT: Mr. Cohen, before you get rolling, maybe 25 you know the answer to the question where the reporter came

1 from.

2 MR. COHEN: I believe he is based in California, your 3 Honor.

4 THE COURT: Where in California?

5 MR. COHEN: I don't know, but I believe we have 6 representatives of his employer in the courtroom.

7 THE COURT: Go ahead.

8 MR. COHEN: Your Honor, I think it's telling there 9 were two things that were absent from the presentation the 10 Court just received: One was a discussion of the relevant 11 legal standards that govern here, and the relevant case law 12 that governs here; and two, the government continues with what 13 I would call argument by conclusion. When your Honor just 14 asked the question about what was wrong with the use of the 15 VPN, the response was, it's wrong because we say it's wrong.

16 THE COURT: I must have missed that.

17 MR. COHEN: That was certainly how we took it.

18 But let me go back to the legal standard, your Honor.
19 The government, as we understand it, at least as of last week, 20 is moving under two statutes, 3148 and 3142(f)(2)(B). And 21 under those standards, it has the burden under 3148 of showing 22 that there is probable cause to believe that the defendant 23 committed a crime.

24 Here, they are relying upon, as I understand, 1512(b), 25 which requires that the defendant act with a knowing and

N8B8BANA

1 willful or evil purpose to threaten, intimidate, or corruptly
2 persuade, or attempt to do so, a witness. And that there is no 3 condition or combination of conditions that will assure the 4 safety of a person or the community, or the defendant is 5 unlikely to abide by those conditions.

6 THE COURT: And if probable cause is found --

7 MR. COHEN: There is a rebuttal presumption.

8 THE COURT: -- there is a presumption.

9 MR. COHEN: There we think the presumption was 10 rebutted because there are conditions that the Court can 11 design -- and designed last week, in fact -- to address the 12 concern, which was the temporary order the Court entered on the 13 consent of the parties. And certainly we think that does it, 14 in terms of resolving this issue, but we would be amenable to 15 any other condition the Court thought was appropriate.

16 And when you look at the cases that construe these 17 legal standards, your Honor, the case cited by the parties is 18 LaFontaine, and it's one of the leading Second Circuit cases on 19 that. The facts in that case are so dramatically different 20 from what we have here, where there was a finding that the bail
21 should be revoked. There you had a bail condition that said 22 the defendant should not contact Witness-X, and it was 23 undisputed that the defendant went out and contacted Witness-X.
24 You had an indictment of the defendant for witness tampering.
25 You had an MCC tape in that case that had been played by the

1 defendant for the witness in violation of the protective order.

2 And even on that record, Judge Mukasey, who was the district 3 court judge at the time, determined it was a close call to 4 order remand. And the Circuit in affirming said -- and I am at 5 page 7 of the printout, but I can get the actual page for your 6 Honor -- although we, like the district court, deem this aspect 7 of the case a close call, they were not going to overturn the 8 district court's determination.

9 And that's on facts that we would submit, your Honor, 10 are dramatically different from what we have here. We don't 11 really have on this record a basis to satisfy the standard. We 12 are not even close to LaFontaine. We are not close to the 13 Brown case, where there was proof that the defendant had 14 offered a bag of cash to the witness. We are also not close on 15 the 3142(f)(2)(B) standard, which your Honor addressed in the 16 Stein case, and also the Circuit addressed in the Vendetti
17 case, where the facts were very, very extreme of pretty obvious 18 repeated violations on a record that was not disputed.

19 And here we have, frankly, with respect, a very thin 20 record with a lot of spin. Let's start with Witness-1. When 21 we were last before your Honor on this, this was sometime in 22 March or April. I apologize, I don't remember the exact date.
23 We were told, your Honor, this is a dramatic, dramatic 24 situation, it's a terrible thing, our client has attempted to 25 tamper with Witness-1. We objected to that characterization

N8B8BANA

1 for record purposes, which the Court permitted us to do, but we 2 didn't litigate the issue because we thought we had resolved it 3 with a practical bail condition.

4 It gets raised now again, re-purposed as some effort
5 to create a pattern, maybe to get the Court to find there is a 6 pattern here. But since that time in March and April, we have 7 gotten discovery from the government, which we didn't have at 8 the time, and also have been able to do our own review, which 9 shows that that e-mail and Signal chat in question was the end 10 of a sequence, not the beginning of a sequence.

11 THE COURT: Well, I question that, frankly. The 12 sequence of documents involves an exchange of some messages in 13 the middle of November, initiated you say by Witness-1, and 14 that may well be true. And then we have the January 15 e-mail, 15 which is what you're talking about that the government relies 16 on. And in between there was something very important. The 17 company went bust. The defendant got arrested. He was 18 charged. And what went before and what went after I find a lot 19 of trouble in reconciling.

20 MR. COHEN: Although the in-between is more
21 complicated, your Honor. It's not one message from Witness-1.
22 It's a follow-up message on November 13, at a time when we 23 know, because it was public, that the defendant was under 24 investigation, at a time when we now know that Witness-1 and 25 others were meeting with the government about the defendant.

N8B8BANA

1 THE COURT: But not known then.

2 MR. COHEN: I think it was known then. The meetings
3 with the government were public.

4 THE COURT: Where is the evidence of that?

5 MR. COHEN: It was reported, I don't have it in front
6 of me, your Honor.

7 And then, I think the fair interpretation of this,
8 your Honor, is there's a couple of reach-outs. There is an 9 effort to help. My client making many public statements that 10 the government has pointed to, that he doesn't back away from, 11 that he was trying to help restore customers, get funds back 12 for customers. And then the final end of the sequence, the 13 reach-out to Witness-1, John Ray, and the law firm for the 14 company.

15 Now, the notion that someone is trying to tamper with 16 a witness, or tend to tamper with the witness, makes no sense 17 when we are talking about the general counsel of a company, 18 that he doesn't control, who himself is represented by his own 19 counsel, who is working with company counsel, who is reporting 20 to the government. It doesn't make any sense that this would 21 be the basis for some alleged tampering. And the government, 22 with respect, is so hard-pressed, in its reply we are getting 23 interpretations of whether he used the word "resource" or 24 "resources," and we are told the use of the plural tense is 25 what turns this into witness tampering.

N8B8BANA

1 Judge, that is nothing like what was in LaFontaine.

2 That's nothing like what was in the other cases that both 3 parties have cited, and I am sure the Court is very familiar 4 with. It doesn't meet the standard under 3148. And it doesn't 5 meet the standard under 3142.

6 Now, turning to the other topics, I thought your Honor 7 asked a very good question about -- all your questions are very 8 good, but the question about VPN, that is not offered as 9 evidence of witness tampering because it couldn't be. It's a 10 very circular way to get to some effort to violate bail 11 conditions, when the use of a VPN, I think it's undisputed, is 12 not inherently deceptive. It's used by companies to give 13 remote access. It's used by the government. And, in fact, the 14 solution to give access to the AW database that the debtor
15 insisted upon, when we did that long document for the Court's 16 approval, was that a VPN be used. So that doesn't carry the 17 day.

18 And that brings us to really the only thing new, which 19 is the communication with the reporter. And one thing we 20 should start with is, the only reason we know about this, your 21 Honor, is because the defendant was complying with his bail 22 conditions. A security guard reviewed the reporter. He was 23 logged in. The communications that were made were made on the 24 pen register. And, as we went over last time, there has been 25 conservatively a million stories about this case, hundreds of

1 thousands about the defendant.

2 THE COURT: And there is no record at all, other than 3 the three or so pages you have turned over, of what passed 4 between your client and the reporter in that meeting, or in 5 whatever it was, or of preceding conversations on the 6 telephone, save whatever notes the reporter may have, which he 7 is not about to turn over without going from here to the 8 Supreme Court and back.

9 MR. COHEN: Right.

10 But, stepping back, there was no gag order in the 11 original bail conditions or any of the modifications either
12 before the magistrate judge or before your Honor. A defendant, 13 as we have discussed last time and in our submission, is 14 permitted under the First Amendment to speak about his case, to 15 speak about his view of his case. He is not limited, as 16 counsel just suggested, to saying, I think I'm innocent, that's 17 it.

18 THE COURT: Of course not. But do you disagree that 19 the law is that once the communication is undertaken as part of 20 or with the intent to intimidate or influence a witness, it's a
21 crime, and the First Amendment has nothing to do with it? Do 22 you disagree with that?

23 MR. COHEN: What I would say, your Honor, is that,
24 where a defendant has a reasonable and fair belief that he is 25 allowed to engage in fair comment, he is not acting with the

N8B8BANA

1 intent required under 1512. I think that's the appropriate way
2 to think about it.

3 And what I keep coming back to, your Honor --

4 THE COURT: You think if two guys walk into a store
5 and say to somebody, boy, this is an awfully nice store you 6 have here, it would be a shame to see it burned to the ground, 7 and, you know, maybe you ought to be nice to us.

8 Now, I suppose it could be said that those fellas 9 walking into the store are just civic-minded people who are 10 expressing their fair comment on the nice operation the man has 11 and how terrible it would be if something happened, and yet, if 12 the intent is to intimidate the man, the owner, it's a crime, 13 and the fact that it was committed by speaking words doesn't 14 give it any First Amendment protection at all.

15 Do you disagree with that?

16 MR. COHEN: I would say it depends on the facts, your 17 Honor.

18 THE COURT: Well, what depends on the facts is what 19 the intent was.

20 MR. COHEN: Correct. I agree with that. And on this 21 record, which is what we are operating on, the showing has not 22 been made. The example you just gave is the sort of example 23 you would see in a case like LaFontaine and Brown and so forth.

24 THE COURT: That's an easy case.

25 MR. COHEN: I would agree with your Honor.

N8B8BANA

1 But what if, for example, and this is to pick up on 2 your Honor's point, a journalist calls the defendant and says, 3 you have been indicted, the government says you're guilty, what 4 do you have to say? And the defendant says, well, I think not 5 only do I think I'm innocent, I think someone else did it, and 6 I think the witnesses against me are lying. That's Gentile.
7 That's the Supreme Court case in Gentile which says that's 8 permitted. And here we have a situation where the defendant 9 fairly believed, in our view, that he was able to make these 10 comments, at the time when it was not inconsistent with the 11 protective order, it's not inconsistent with the bail 12 conditions, it's not inconsistent with any order that had been 13 issued by the Court. Obviously, it would be a different 14 situation after last week when the Court had issued the 15 temporary order, that would be a very different analysis.

16 So, your Honor, we submit that when you come back to 17 what the cases say and what the rule says, the statute says -- 18 we are talking about 3148, but 3142(f), as I'm sure your Honor 19 knows, has a clear and convincing standard to show, 20 essentially, the elements of witness tampering and, again, that 21 there is no condition or combination of conditions that would 22 assure the appearance -- we think the showing hasn't been made 23 on this record, that the Court, as it has already, can craft 24 conditions, which would be extending the temporary order to a 25 permanent one. If there are other conditions the Court would

N8B8BANA

1 like to add, I am sure we would be amenable to it. But here we 2 are two months before trial, your Honor, we want to be able to 3 prepare for trial in a realistic, meaningful way. Getting sort 4 of boilerplate platitudes about how everything can be converted 5 to hard drives in a week, we are still getting discovery that 6 was promised to us two months ago, so I am skeptical of that.

7 That was all I wanted to say, your Honor. I think if 8 the Court would like further discussion on the First Amendment, 9 Mr. Everdell is prepared to address that.

10 THE COURT: I don't think there is really a dispute
11 about the First Amendment. I think the principles are clear.
12 The question, as you rightly said, are the facts.

13 MR. COHEN: I know at the end of the last conference
14 the Court said it was interested in the First Amendment issues.

15 THE COURT: Of course. It's a serious question, and I 16 have spent a lot of time looking into it and reading all the 17 material you submitted, none of which alluded to the problem of 18 speech with a criminal intent. Quite a significant omission, 19 if I may say so, especially whence it came. But there we are.
20 I don't think I need anything further.

21 MR. COHEN: I agree with your Honor, it's 22 fundamentally a fact determination. That on this record before 23 the Court, given the two standards that the government is 24 relying on, we are not even close to those cases, and the right 25 way to address this is with appropriate conditions.

N8B8BANA

1 THE COURT: Thank you.

2 Anything else, Ms. Sassoon?

3 MS. SASSOON: Just briefly, your Honor.

4 I think the fact that the defendant here was more 5 subtle in his methods than a mobster does not mean that the 6 conduct was benign, that it wasn't designed to evade his bail 7 conditions, and that it wasn't done with a criminal intent, 8 especially here when some of the behavior tracked the 9 defendant's MO while he was CEO of FTX, and that includes 10 instructing his employees to delete their messages and telling 11 multiple people a variation of, there is only downside to 12 putting things in writing, especially when it comes to 13 regulators. And then doing that same thing here of meeting in 14 person with a reporter who he had active communication with by 15 other methods. The clear inference is that he was continuing 16 the same type of technique to avoid detection, which is not the 17 behavior of someone who reasonably and fairly believes what he 18 is doing is just fair comment, when he is secretively providing 19 documents and not agreeing to be identified as the source for 20 the article.

21 I also want to make clear that, while we think that 22 this was done improperly and to intimidate Caroline Ellison a 23 couple of months before trial, the Court need not find that 24 this conduct itself was witness tampering under a criminal 25 statute for detention to be appropriate here. One of the bases

N8B8BANA

1 that we argued for detention is 18 U.S.C. 3148, and if the 2 Court deems the contact with Witness-1 to have been witness 3 tampering under the probable cause standard, that triggers the 4 rebuttable presumption. And it's enough for the Court to then 5 conclude under either subsection that detention is appropriate, 6 and one of those is that he is unlikely to abide his bail
7 conditions.

8 And so, even if the Court concludes that the conduct 9 with respect to Ms. Ellison falls short of LaFontaine or the 10 other cases that you have been looking at, detention is still 11 appropriate here given all of the evidence that this is not a 12 defendant who is likely to abide by his bail conditions and who 13 seems intent on interfering with the integrity of the trial.

14 THE COURT: Thank you.

15 MR. COHEN: Your Honor, if I might briefly respond?

16 THE COURT: Briefly.

17 MR. COHEN: Again, nothing in counsel's presentation
18 changes the record. The defendant did not intend to tamper 19 with witnesses, and the record doesn't support it under either
20 the 3148 or 3142 standard. We get more allegations and no 21 proffer of proof. As the Court knows, we have denied the 22 allegations about deletion. We plan to contest that at trial.

23 THE COURT: I'm sorry. You have denied the 24 allegations about?

25 MR. COHEN: Deletion. What counsel just said that he

N8B8BANA

1 was directing deletion of e-mails.

2 THE COURT: He was directing the use of an encrypted 3 app and that it be set to delete everything after 30 days, 4 isn't that true?

5 MR. COHEN: We dispute that that was done for the 6 purpose of --

7 THE COURT: You don't dispute that it was done, right?

8 MR. COHEN: We also don't dispute that that very 9 system was used by everyone in the company, including the 10 lawyers.

11 THE COURT: That's neither here nor there. I am 12 trying to get to the question of whether you acknowledge that 13 at his direction that system was used, whether it was because 14 he liked apple pie or for some other reason.

15 MR. COHEN: It doesn't quite work like that.
16 Sometimes he would do it, sometimes others would do it.

17 THE COURT: Sometimes he would do what?

18 MR. COHEN: He would put on the delete function, 19 sometimes others would.

20 THE COURT: And didn't he instruct people to use it?

21 MR. COHEN: Not for the purpose the government is 22 suggesting.

23 THE COURT: I guess I am not going to get a straight 24 answer, Mr. Cohen. I appreciate how candid you have been all 25 through this proceeding. I admire the work you have done here,

N8B8BANA

1 to tell you the truth. But it's a simple question. May I have 2 an answer?

3 (Counsel confers with defendant)

4 MR. COHEN: There is a distinction here that I'm not 5 sure is relevant to the discussion we are having with the 6 Court. But certainly the defendant would set some of his own
7 settings to delete, and I think that's the Court's question.

8 THE COURT: No, it wasn't. It was included within the 9 question, but the question went more broadly to people in the 10 company.

11 MR. COHEN: He disputes that.

12 THE COURT: At all. He never gave such direction?

13 MR. COHEN: He disputes that, your Honor.

14 Lastly, in terms of the last point that counsel made, 15 that was under a 3148 factor about unlikely to abide by 16 conditions. And I think there is a good record here of the 17 defendant abiding by very complex conditions. In fact, the 18 reason we have this instant dispute presented to the Court is 19 because the conditions were followed.

20 So, again, we submit that the Court can construct a 21 set of conditions that would be the least restrictive 22 alternative to assure the safety of a person or the community.

23 THE COURT: Thank you.

24 Ms. Sassoon, am I incorrect in recalling that earlier 25 in these proceedings about bail, over many months, there was a

N8B8BANA

1 representation or a proffer not only that the defendant had 2 instructed others in the company to use the delete function, 3 but also made a comment to the effect that legal cases are 4 built on documents and that's why you should do it, or words to 5 that effect?

6 MS. SASSOON: Yes, your Honor. And, as the Court and 7 the parties know, at a bail hearing you can proceed by proffer.
8 I am surprised to hear defense counsel dispute that this was a 9 company-wide policy that the defendant instituted. And if the 10 Court thought it was relevant or important, we could provide 11 more documentation of that.

12 For purposes of today, I will say we previously made 13 that proffer to the Court, and just yesterday we were meeting 14 with a different witness, who also stated that the defendant 15 instituted this auto-deletion policy and indicated to him that 16 it was only downside if their company communications were in 17 writing because regulators could review them. And that's in 18 sum and substance what was proffered to us.

19 And we have also seen, in the evidence and records in 20 this case, that around August 2021, these auto-delete features 21 were instituted on company communications, and it's our 22 understanding from our investigation that this was a policy 23 instituted by the defendant.

24 THE COURT: Mr. Cohen, does your client dispute the 25 substance of the remark attributed to him about there being

N8B8BANA

1 only downside if communications were in writing?

2 MR. COHEN: Your Honor, I think what my client would 3 say is a couple of things on that. That what he said, and 4 witnesses may be misremembering it, is don't write things that 5 could be taken out of context, which is very different from the 6 way that it's being presented in the court. That's what we 7 thought then, that's what we thought at the time.

8 And as your Honor may recall, there was some 9 litigation about us trying to get access to the files from the 10 outside law firm because the policies, at least our client's 11 understanding, and there's billing records to confirm this, the 12 policies about deletion and so forth were reviewed by an 13 outside and an inside firm. So we just have a very different 14 view of this evidence, your Honor, and obviously that's for 15 trial.

16 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

17 I am prepared to rule on this now, and it may take 18 more than five minutes.

19 As we all know, the defendant in this case is charged 20 with perpetrating a multibillion dollar fraud relating to his 21 operation of cryptocurrency companies that he founded and 22 controlled, FTX and Alameda. He was arrested in the Bahamas on 23 December 12, 2023 and extradited to the United States on or 24 about December 21. He initially was released on a $250 million 25 personal recognizance bond, subject to conditions, including

N8B8BANA

1 detention in his parents' home in California.

2 At the same time, the government announced that
3 Caroline Ellison and Gary Wang both had pleaded guilty in this 4 case and were cooperating with the government. Both formerly
5 were senior executives of one or both of the defendant's
6 companies, and perhaps others, and in the case of Ms. Ellison, 7 formerly had been in one or more intimate relationships with 8 the defendant.

9 Over the ensuing months, the better part of a year by 10 this time, the conditions of defendant's release have been 11 tightened, at least twice that I remember, and probably more
12 times, in response to government concerns that the defendant
13 was tampering or might tamper with witnesses or engage in other 14 troublesome conduct.

15 On July 20, the government again moved to tighten the 16 conditions of the defendant's release, at that time by limiting 17 extrajudicial statements by the parties and witnesses that were 18 likely to interfere with a fair trial. Its focus was largely 19 on the defendant's alleged leak of private materials of Ms.
20 Ellison to the New York Times.

21 Also, following some concessions by the defendant and 22 the receipt by the government of additional information,
23 basically relating to the frequency of the defendant's contacts
24 with media, but also others, the government, on the 26th of 25 July, orally moved to revoke the defendant's bail. Since then

N8B8BANA

1 I have received submissions by members of the media and from a 2 well-known constitutional scholar who submitted views in this 3 case in the unusual form of an affidavit rather than an amicus 4 curiae brief. But all of these were addressed to the 5 contention that limitations on extrajudicial statements would 6 violate the First Amendment. I have since had rather full 7 briefing and heard argument.

8 Now, I am going to focus on Section 3148(b), which 9 provides, in relevant part, that a judge shall enter an order 10 of revocation and detention if after a hearing the judge finds:

11 First, that there is either probable cause to believe 12 that the person has committed a federal, state or local crime
13 while on release, or that there is clear and convincing 14 evidence that the person has violated any other condition of 15 release; and in addition finds either, based on factors set 16 forth elsewhere in the Bail Reform Act, there is no condition 17 or combination of conditions of release that would assure that 18 the person will not flee or pose a danger to the safety of any 19 other person or the community, or, alternatively, that the 20 person is unlikely to abide by any condition or combination of 21 conditions of release.

22 If there is probable cause to believe that a 23 defendant, while on release, committed a felony, then -- and I 24 quote -- "a rebuttable presumption arises that no condition or 25 combination of conditions will assure that the person will not

N8B8BANA

1 pose a danger to the safety of any other person or the 2 community." And I refer to 18 U.S.C. 3148(b) and the 3 LaFontaine case to which counsel have referred.

4 The government's position is that the record in this 5 case now establishes that there is probable cause to believe 6 that the defendant committed attempted witness tampering and/or 7 attempted obstruction of justice, either of which would be a
8 felony, and I am going to address witness tampering.

9 The relevant statute is 18 U.S.C., Section 1512(b),
10 which provides in substance, and in relevant part, that whoever
11 knowingly uses intimidation, threatens or corruptly persuades
12 another person, or attempts to do so, with intent to influence,
13 delay, or prevent the testimony of any person in an official
14 proceeding is guilty of a felony.

15 I have previously written, following the Second
16 Circuit's decision -- namely, LaFontaine -- that nonviolent
17 witness tampering and obstruction poses a danger to the 18 community and that the risk of such activities in an 19 appropriate case would support pretrial detention. United 20 States v. Stein, 2005 WL 8157371, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 14, 21 2005). Probable cause exists when there is a practical 22 probability that the evidence supports a finding that the 23 defendant has committed a crime while on bail.

24 Now, let's look at the factual basis the government
25 relies on. On January 15, the defendant sent the general

N8B8BANA

1 counsel of FTX US, who has been referred to as Witness-1, the
2 following message via Signal, an encrypted communications
3 medium: "Hey, I know it's been a whole while since we have 4 talked, and I know things have ended up on the wrong foot. I
5 would really love to reconnect and see if there is a way for us
6 to have a constructive relationship, use each other as 7 resources when possible, or at least vet things with each 8 other. I would love to get on a phone call sometime soon and 9 chat."

10 The defendant has proposed a quite benign reading of 11 that message. It's one I didn't share at the beginning, and I
12 don't share it now.

13 The message is addressed to Witness-1 and seeks 14 reconciliation of an apparently damaged personal relationship.

15 Now let's focus on the time period. The previous 16 communications, at least written communications, between Mr.
17 Bankman-Fried and Witness-1 had been before the disaster really
18 struck publicly, before the defendant was indicted, before Ms.
19 Ellison and Mr. Wang were known to be cooperating with the 20 government and pleading guilty. Witness-1 says in this January 21 15 message -- excuse me, Mr. Bankman-Fried says, "The 22 relationship was left in a bad place and we haven't talked for 23 quite a long time," suggesting that they hadn't been in contact
24 since before, to use a colloquial phrase, it all hit the fan.
25 And the message proposes that the defendant and Witness-1 "vet

N8B8BANA

1 things with each other."

2 Now, this isn't the time for a final after-trial
3 determination about what all of this meant. It's a time for 4 assessing probable cause. The message, in my opinion, in its 5 entirety seems to be an invitation for Witness-1 to get 6 together with Mr. Bankman-Fried so that his views and 7 recollections would be on the same page with the defendant's
8 version of events, and in that way make the relationship
9 between the two of them more constructive. In the past, I
10 referred to this as probably being an effort to have the two of 11 them sing out of the same hymn book for their mutual benefit,
12 and I rather suspect that as of January 15, with indictments of 13 some top people in the company already having come down, Mr.
14 Bankman-Fried was wondering whether Witness-1 was wondering
15 whether Witness-1 might be on the list in the future.

16 Now, Mr. Cohen, and I meant every good thing I said
17 when I had an exchange with him before, he's a wonderful lawyer
18 and he's doing a wonderful job, has a different view. He says,
19 when I reached that view at the beginning of February, that I 20 didn't have the full context of these communications, which he 21 says show that this Signal message to Witness-1 was benign and 22 when you consider it all together, it doesn't support probable
23 cause. I don't agree with that.

24 Mr. Cohen submits evidence that Mr. Bankman-Fried and 25 Witness-1 exchanged messages in mid-November, but that was in a

N8B8BANA

1 different world. That was almost two months before this
2 January 15 message. While it may be true historically that the 3 first of these messages between the two individuals was made by 4 Witness-1, that first message happened long before the time 5 period in which the January 15 message was written, and the 6 January 15 message, obviously, by its own terms, reinitiated
7 the communication between them that had lapsed for some time.

8 So I don't buy the argument that it was Witness-1 who 9 reached out first to encourage the defendant to align his 10 efforts with Witness-1, except in one maybe narrow sense. It
11 was to everybody's interest, once Mr. Bankman-Fried had been 12 indicted, once the companies had gone bust, to support customer
13 assets and recover as much as could be recovered. That all
14 stood potentially to benefit everybody.

15 So the January 15 conversation, or overture, or 16 message, to be more precise, comes about in a radically
17 different context than the ones on which the defendant relies
18 as showing that I took this out of context. I didn't at all.
19 And it's his evidence that proves it.

20 There is no evidence before me of any communication
21 between Witness-1 and the defendant following the defendant's
22 arrest or even after mid-November until January 15.

23 The second point is this. The defense relies on the 24 fact that Mr. Bankman-Fried communicated with John Ray, who 25 once Mr. Bankman-Fried was out of these companies was the

N8B8BANA

1 receiver or liquidator, or whatever the magic term is under
2 Bahamian law, of FTX, and with a partner at Sullivan &
3 Cromwell, which is representing the FTX debtors I believe.

4 Now, first of all, there is a vast difference between 5 John Ray and Sullivan & Cromwell, on the one hand, and 6 Witness-1 on the other. Witness-1 is a witness to the charged 7 crimes. Mr. Ray and Sullivan & Cromwell, so far as this record
8 shows, were not. The interest of Ray and Sullivan & Cromwell 9 was to marshall the assets. Mr. Bankman-Fried evidently 10 thought helping them do that, to the extent he might accomplish 11 that, would help Mr. Bankman-Fried, but it wasn't because they 12 were going to help him as witnesses in this case.

13 Secondly, unlike Mr. Bankman-Fried's messages to 14 Mr. Ray and Sullivan & Cromwell, his message to Witness-1
15 referred to Bankman-Fried, on the one hand, and Witness-1 16 "using each other as resources" and "vetting things with each
17 other." Nothing like that was said to Ray and Sullivan &
18 Cromwell. Those are things that are said between people with a 19 common interest in a litigation situation like this one.

20 Finally, in Mr. Bankman-Fried's messages to Mr. Ray, 21 he copied his attorneys. He did not copy any attorneys on the 22 message to Witness-1.

23 I can imagine that a jury conceivably might conclude 24 that the message to Witness-1 was not what it now appears to 25 have been. But in my mind there is a practical probability

N8B8BANA

1 that the message was an attempt to have Witness-1 and the 2 defendant, to use the phrase I used in February, sing out of 3 the same hymn book, and it was an attempt at witness tampering.

4 I come to the more recent event, which relates to the 5 New York Times July 20, 2023 article, titled "Inside the 6 Private Writings of Caroline Ellison, Star Witness in the FTX
7 case." The article quotes from personal diaries and other
8 private documents written by Ms. Ellison. They describe her
9 feelings and insecurities with respect to her work at Alameda
10 and her personal relationship with the defendant. The article
11 doesn't state the source or sources of the quoted materials,
12 the documents. It now is undisputed that the defendant spoke
13 to at least one of the New York Times authors many, many times
14 in the period preceding the publication and, on the virtual eve 15 of the publication of the article, entertained that reporter at 16 his parents' home in Palo Alto, California, and showed the 17 reporter allegedly a small portion of Ms. Ellison's private 18 writings. Those writings portrayed Ms. Ellison in an 19 unfavorable light. I don't know what else was shown. I don't 20 know what else was said. The defense has not proffered that.
21 The government has not either, presumably because they don't 22 have it.

23 Based on the government's public filings and 24 statements in court, it had been known widely, at least since 25 the defendant was presented in this court in November, months

N8B8BANA

1 before the Times article was published, that Ms. Ellison would 2 be an important witness at the defendant's trial. It is the 3 government's position that -- and I am quoting the government
4 here -- "by sharing Ms. Ellison's private writings about her 5 insecurities and heartache with the hope that it would be 6 published in the New York Times, the defendant's conduct was 7 intended, at least in part, to harass Ellison and to hinder, 8 prevent or dissuade her from testifying, or to influence the 9 testimony of Ellison, and to influence or prevent others by 10 creating the specter that their most intimate business is at 11 risk of being reported to the press, and thus to influence 12 prospective jurors."

13 Now, I lost where I should have closed that quote. I 14 will fix that in the transcript. But the substance of what I 15 just read out is the substance of the government's position, 16 which in any case is already a matter of public record because 17 I am taking it out of a publicly filed document.

18 Now, the defendant's main response has been that the 19 defendant has a First Amendment right to communicate with the 20 press, and certainly the various press organizations that have 21 been heard from on my docket take the same position.

22 I am exceptionally mindful of the defendant's First 23 Amendment rights, and there isn't any question that having 24 frequent contact with the press on its own, and for no malign
25 purpose, does not constitute obstruction or witness tampering

N8B8BANA

1 or anything else criminal. But the First Amendment arguments,
2 as I think is clear from my colloquy with counsel, ignore a
3 very well established principle that has been articulated in a
4 line of Supreme Court decisions going back to a case called 5 Giboney v. Empire Storage, 336 U.S. 490 (1949), decided in the 6 40s. The Supreme Court there said, "It has never been deemed 7 an abridgment of freedom of speech or press to make a course of 8 conduct illegal merely because the conduct was in part 9 initiated, evidenced, or carried out by means of language, 10 either spoken, written or printed." Id. at 503. And lest 11 anybody think I am relying on ancient legal history from the 12 last century, the Supreme Court repeated that point within the 13 last couple of weeks in United States v. Hansen, in which it 14 held that "speech intended to bring about a particular unlawful 15 act has no social value" and therefore "is unprotected."

16 Thus, a defendant's speech is not protected to the 17 extent that it is intended to bring about a crime; where such 18 an intent is present, the speech becomes part of a crime. And 19 that's precisely why my hypothetical of two thugs going into a
20 grocery store and making the statement that I related to 21 counsel during the colloquy is a crime. The purpose of that is 22 to extort the grocery store. And the fact that the extortion
23 is carried out by spoken words and, indeed, no physical actions
24 other than being there, doesn't matter.

25 It's worth noting also that a defendant may be

N8B8BANA

1 convicted even of a specific intent crime as long as the 2 defendant acted out of mixed motives, as long as one of those 3 motives satisfies the necessary criminal intent. I cite, for 4 example, United States v. Technodyne, 753 F.3d 368, at 365.

5 So the question boils down to whether there is a 6 practical probability that Mr. Bankman-Fried was motivated even 7 in part by a desire to influence or intimidate Ms. Ellison 8 and/or other witnesses.

9 Now, the defense has made a lot of the fact that he 10 has gotten a lot of bad press and he is entitled to try to 11 repair his reputation. Fair enough. I assume for the purposes 12 of this discussion that that was a material part of his 13 motivation in all of his speaking out to the press. But I find 14 that there was a practical probability that with respect to the 15 communication with Witness-1 and Ms. Ellison, and quite likely 16 others, whose names we don't even know, or at least I don't at 17 this point, was intended also, even if in modest part, to 18 influence those people, to have them back off, to have them 19 hedge their cooperation with the government in the case of 20 those who have agreed to cooperate.

21 And there are other circumstances that support my 22 judgment that there is probable cause to believe he acted at 23 least in part with that motive. I find it significant that the 24 defendant, rather than providing copies of the excerpts from 25 Ellison's private papers to a reporter with whom he had been in

N8B8BANA

1 close touch, he had the reporter come to his home, and didn't 2 give him copies; he let the reporter read it and take notes
3 from it. We know he took notes because there are quotes in the 4 New York Times that are identical to the language in those 5 documents. It was a way, in his view, of doing this in a
6 manner in which he was least likely to be caught; not 7 impossible to be caught, least likely. He was covering his 8 tracks.

9 Also, the content of these documents in some respects
10 tends to support the conclusion they are extremely, in some 11 parts, personal and intimate. Those parts are relationship 12 oriented, not business, commercially or legally oriented, 13 except -- and I don't say that's universally true of the 14 content, but it is true of parts of the content -- they are 15 something that someone who has been in a relationship, or is in 16 a relationship, would be very unlikely to share with anybody, 17 lest the New York Times, except to hurt, discredit, and 18 frighten the subject of the material. Those views are not 19 essential to my conclusion, but I believe they tend to support 20 it.

21 In view of the evidence, specifically the proffers
22 presented by both sides, to the extent each is uncontradicted, 23 my conclusion is that there is probable cause to believe that 24 the defendant has attempted to tamper with witnesses at least 25 twice within the meaning of 18 U.S.C., Section 1512(b). I am

1 speaking of Witness-1 and Ms. Ellison.

2 Accordingly, under Section 3148, there is a rebuttal
3 presumption that no condition or combination of conditions will 4 assure that Mr. Bankman-Fried will not pose a danger to the 5 safety of any other person or his community if he remains at 6 liberty. It's well established in prior cases that the safety 7 of the community includes protecting the community against the 8 consequences of witness tampering.

9 Mr. Cohen admirably argues that the presumption has 10 been rebutted. I disagree. He has offered up a gag order on 11 all communications with the press.

12 Now, it's not, strictly speaking, exactly that broad,
13 but the problems are multiple with such a thing. I don't have 14 the text of the temporary order before me. Maybe, Andy, you
15 can put it on my computer screen. Here it is.

16 The temporary order that I signed on July 26, for one
17 thing, has a carve-out from media contacts for assertions of 18 innocence or references to information that is contained either
19 in publicly filed court filings or transcripts of court
20 proceedings in the case. So right away, even if the gag on 21 communications with the media were in effect long term, it
22 doesn't really stop all communications with the media. It 23 leaves one fighting about what are references to information 24 contained in various kinds of documents.

25 More broadly, the operative part, the first and most

1 significant part of the previous order, would prohibit him, if 2 I were to adopt this long-term, from communicating with any 3 public communications media anything about the case. In this 4 day and age, I don't know what public communications media are,
5 and I don't think anybody else does either. Is that anybody
6 who posts on Instagram? How about people who comment on the 7 Washington Post opinion pieces? It's arguably anybody who 8 wants to be included. Moreover, judging by the submissions I
9 have received from the media, even if I were to go along with 10 this despite the problems, I'd rather imagine we would be in 11 for collateral litigation of some moment. I don't think that 12 it's a workable solution longer term, particularly with someone 13 who has shown a willingness and desire to risk crossing the 14 line in an effort to get right up to it, no matter where the 15 line is.

16 It's certainly true, for example, that his use of the 17 VPN to watch a football game over an account on which he wasn't 18 entitled to watch it from the United States didn't violate any 19 of his bail conditions. It wasn't even a big deal in and of 20 itself, but there it is. He subscribed to this service from 21 the Bahamas, then used a VPN to log into it as if he were in 22 the Bahamas, when he was sitting in Palo Alto and could have 23 watched the game on public television. It says something about 24 the mindset. The means of sharing the documents with the New 25 York Times says to me something about the mindset. And I think

N8B8BANA

1 he has already, without violating any other bail condition,
2 save that he not commit another crime, has gone up to the line
3 over and over again.

4 So all things considered, I am going to revoke bail,
5 but I have a couple of other things to say. I fully appreciate 6 everything that Mr. Cohen said last time we were together and 7 today concerning the desirability of continuing trial
8 preparation without the defendant being incarcerated. It's not 9 one of the factors that I am obliged or, indeed, arguably even 10 permitted by the statute to consider here, but I have 11 considered it. I was a trial lawyer in my youth and I know 12 what Mr. Cohen is talking about, and I appreciate it. I don't 13 think, however, that the revocation of bail is quite the 14 insurmountable problem that has been made out.

15 Now, Ms. Sassoon spoke about the possibility of 16 detention in the Putnam County Correctional Facility, and that 17 internet access of some kind would be available there. And I 18 don't know whether that's actually doable. And I think if the 19 government has any such thing in mind, they better talk to the 20 marshal for this district who may have views on this subject.
21 And that's the first thing. I am not opposed to that. I am 22 not taking any position on it. But I am more focused on the 23 possibility that he will be detained pending trial at the MDC, 24 which is not on anybody's list of five star facilities.

25 That said, I understand that he could have a dedicated

1 laptop at the MDC, which would be retained in the visiting room
2 area, to which he would have access very liberally -- nine, 3 ten, eleven, twelve hours a day, I'm not sure exactly. He 4 would be permitted, as I understand it, to retain optical disks
5 and hard drives in his housing area and take them with him when 6 he goes to the laptops. I understand that these various 7 databases could be put on portable disks or drives. I am not 8 an expert on how long it would take. I imagine the necessary
9 software could be put on the laptop, but I'm not an expert on 10 that.

11 I am also aware that the trial date is coming before 12 too very long, and there is a remedy of last resort here if the 13 situation can't be worked out appropriately wherever he is 14 detained. And that is Section 3142(i) of the Bail Reform Act, 15 which provides in part: The judicial officer may by subsequent 16 order permit the temporary release of the person, i.e., the 17 defendant, in the custody of the United States marshal, or 18 another appropriate person, to the extent that judicial officer 19 determines such release to be necessary for preparation of the 20 person's defense or for another compelling reason.

21 Now, what that says to me is that, on an appropriate
22 showing, I could entertain -- I am not promising what I would 23 do with it, but I could entertain -- an application for Mr.
24 Bankman-Fried to spend time, possibly significant time as trial 25 approaches, in counsel's office, under supervision and under

N8B8BANA

1 appropriate safeguards, so that any problems with the 2 correctional situation could be avoided for significant periods
3 of time.

4 Ms. Sassoon.

5 MS. SASSOON: Yes, your Honor.

6 In preparation for this hearing, the government also 7 communicated with the MDC to understand the discovery access, 8 and your Honor is correct that they have dedicated desktops as 9 well as situations where they allow a laptop for discovery 10 review. The reason why the government is proposing Putnam is 11 because, given where we are in the case and the amount of 12 discovery that has been produced to date given that the 13 defendant was not detained at the outset, the time it would 14 take to load the discovery we have today onto a laptop would 15 take at least weeks, based on our conversations with our IT 16 folks, and we don't have complete visibility at this point into 17 how readable or searchable that data would be in this format, 18 which is why we are proposing Putnam, where instead he could 19 have more immediate access to the discovery through the 20 defense's Relativity database and be able to review the 21 discovery through the internet in the searchable format.

22 My understanding in terms of the marshal's willingness 23 to accommodate this is that Putnam would have room for the 24 defendant, that the FBI would assist in transporting him there, 25 but that for trial itself the defendant would have to be at the

N8B8BANA

1 MDC or somewhere closer, because to transport him here for 2 trial each day I think would be several hours each way. At 3 that point I think the discovery issues will be more 4 manageable, in that the defendant has had these many months to 5 review discovery, he will have the time in advance of trial to 6 review discovery, and by the time trial itself is actually 7 starting, we will have a universe of trial exhibits that could 8 be easily put onto a drive and accessed and reviewed at the MDC
9 given its expansive hours for discovery review and trial 10 preparation.

11 One last thing. With respect to 3142(i), I know we 12 are not at that crossroads yet. My understanding from 13 preliminary conversations is there are some obstacles toward 14 arranging to bring a defendant to a place like an attorney's 15 office from a security standpoint. But if that is something 16 that the Court wishes to explore, we can get additional 17 information about that.

18 THE COURT: I think it's sufficient that if we get to 19 the point that Mr. Cohen feels he needs something like that, 20 first explore it, explore it with Mr. Cohen, and if I need to 21 do something, I will do it, provided I am convinced that it's 22 safe and efficacious and so forth.

23 So bail is revoked. The defendant is remanded.

24 Is there anything else, Mr. Cohen?

25 MR. COHEN: Yes, your Honor, a couple of things.

N8B8BANA

1 Obviously, we intend to appeal this. So I believe we 2 are going to need a written order from your Honor so we have 3 something to appeal from. I don't know if the Court will be 4 issuing one.

5 THE COURT: Look, you will have the transcript
6 overnight, I'm sure, right? And I can do a short form order 7 before I leave the premises today.

8 MR. COHEN: Also, your Honor, we have an application
9 to stay your Honor's ruling today pending appeal.

10 THE COURT: Ms. Sassoon.

11 MS. SASSOON: May I have a moment, your Honor.
12 We oppose that, your Honor.

13 THE COURT: You want to address it? Who wants to 14 speak first?

15 MR. COHEN: Your Honor, we submit that there are very 16 important issues here relating to a discussion we have been 17 having -- let me go over here -- a discussion we have been 18 having about application of 3148 and 3142(f)(2)(B). We have an 19 unusual --

20 THE COURT: You're aware that I didn't rely on 3142.

21 MR. COHEN: I understand, your Honor.

22 We have an unusual situation factually, and we think 23 this is something that the Circuit will take on its motion 24 calendar. We won't docket it as a normal appeal so we can have 25 resolution quickly. And not to repeat the argument, we

N8B8BANA

1 understand the Court has ruled, but we think there are novel
2 issues here about the application of 3148 and its interplay
3 with 1512, as well as the First Amendment context. Obviously, 4 we respectfully disagree and want go to the Circuit and believe 5 it can be done promptly. There has been no allegation of any 6 conduct by the defendant since your Honor issued the temporary 7 order which was more than a week ago. So we are not talking 8 about a long period of time. So we would ask that the Court 9 stay today's ruling and allow us time to appeal to the Circuit.

10 THE COURT: Thank you.

11 MS. SASSOON: Your Honor, this case does not appear to 12 involve a novel application of 3148. Your Honor found not one, 13 but two instances of probable cause that the defendant 14 committed a felony. The order would have been supported by one 15 of those alone and by the other indications of the defendant
16 going up against the line of his bail conditions. And given 17 that finding by the Court, there is a lot of reason for concern 18 that if there is an interim period of several days before the 19 defendant is detained, who knows what kind of mischief he can 20 accomplish in that time with the will to do so. And so we 21 would oppose.

22 THE COURT: Mr. Cohen, I respect your application. I
23 would have made it myself if I were in your shoes. You know
24 that. But I am going to deny it, and I am going to deny it 25 because I disagree that there is anything novel about this

N8B8BANA

1 other than a factual issue. And the factual issue, and I think 2 our colloquy established that everybody agreed on this, was 3 whether the proffered facts that are not in dispute give rise 4 to probable cause; whether a reasonable person viewing it all 5 would consider it practically likely that the defendant had 6 attempted to tamper. That is not a question of law. It has 7 nothing to do with the First Amendment. I think by the end of 8 the discussion today we all agreed on what the First Amendment
9 had to say about this. 3142 is not involved in this. I didn't 10 rely on it at all. And 3148 is clear.

11 You have simply an appeal in which you are going to 12 argue that it was unreasonable for me to find the probability 13 given the facts. You have a right to take that up, but I don't 14 think the likelihood of success on that is very high, 15 recognizing always that I never think back when my rulings are 16 appealed, and once in a while I find out otherwise. But that's 17 their job, and I do mine, and we all understand that. And if I 18 thought there really was a substantial issue, I would give you 19 what you asked, but I don't.

20 Okay. The defendant is remanded.

21 Thank you, all.

22 MS. SASSOON: One point just for the record.

23 In the government's view, this should not change 24 anything about the trial schedule or the pretrial deadlines, 25 but we do have a number of deadlines on Monday and Wednesday of

N8B8BANA

1 next week. So I want to confirm that the government intends to 2 stick by those deadlines and inquire if anyone has a different 3 view.

4 MR. COHEN: We would like to be able to come back to 5 your Honor on that.

6 THE COURT: Your deadline is Monday?

7 MS. SASSOON: For motions in limine and Rule 404(b)
8 notice, your Honor.

9 MR. COHEN: We are going to make the Monday deadline.
10 I didn't know that's what counsel was referring to.

11 THE COURT: So you are going to make the Monday 12 deadline.

13 And then the next deadline after Monday is when?

14 MS. SASSOON: Wednesday for expert notice and defense 15 notice on advice of counsel and mental defect.

16 MR. COHEN: We are going to make that deadline as 17 well, your Honor. I didn't know if counsel meant other 18 deadlines beyond that which may be impacted by an appeal and so 19 forth.

20 THE COURT: So I think we are all right at least for a 21 few days.

22 MR. COHEN: Yes.

23 MS. SASSOON: Part of the concern here is our motions
24 are going to disclose information about the trial. Again, I 25 see no reason why this should prompt a request for a lengthy

N8B8BANA

1 trial adjournment, but in the event that one is anticipated --

2 THE COURT: Well, if one is anticipated, I better find 3 out now.

4 Mr. Cohen.

5 MR. COHEN: Your Honor, we are going to wait and see 6 what we receive from the government, but at the moment we have 7 no application to adjourn the trial date.

N8B8BANA

1 have emphasized that in court and in our papers. We don't view
2 this as a First Amendment issue given the means by which the
3 defendant tried to do this, which we consider amounting to 4 witness intimidation and tampering.

5 THE COURT: So the line, if I understand you
6 correctly, is where the intent, in whole or in part, is to 7 influence, intimidate, or various other things a witness, yes?

8 MS. SASSOON: I think it's the intent, and I think
9 that intent is clear here. But I also think the substance of 10 the communication matters too. If he came out and said, I'm 11 innocent or I dispute the allegations in the indictment, that's 12 one type of communication. Whereas, if the substance of the 13 communication can only be understood as trying to influence the 14 public's opinion by discrediting and harassing a witness,
15 that's both part of the witness intimidation, but also part of 16 what the rules, in governing the conduct of the attorneys at 17 the very least, consider tainting the jury and making improper
18 communication.

19 THE COURT: The conduct informs one's view of the 20 intent, that is the substance of the communication, right?

21 MS. SASSOON: Yes.

22 In our view, the defense has not really engaged with 23 their view of what the least restrictive conditions should be 24 if the Court accepts the government's view of the evidence.
25 They have raised concerns about discovery access in the event

N8B8BANA

1 thousands about the defendant.

2 THE COURT: And there is no record at all, other than 3 the three ^{or so} pages you have turned over, of what passed between 4 your client and the reporter in that meeting, or in whatever it 5 was, ^{or} of preceding conversations on the telephone, save whatever 6 notes the reporter may have, which he is not about to turn over 7 without going from here to the Supreme Court and back.

8 MR. COHEN: Right.

9 But, stepping back, there was no gag order in the 10 original bail conditions or any of the modifications either
11 before the magistrate judge or before your Honor. A defendant, 12 as we have discussed last time and in our submission, is 13 permitted under the First Amendment to speak about his case, to
15 counsel just suggested, to saying, I think I'm innocent, that's 16 it.

17 THE COURT: Of course not. But do you disagree that 18 the law is that once the communication is undertaken as part of 19 or with the intent to intimidate or influence a witness, it's a
20 crime, and the First Amendment has nothing to do with it? Do 21 you disagree with that?

22 MR. COHEN: What I would say, your Honor, is that,
23 where a defendant has a reasonable and fair belief that he is 24 allowed to engage in fair comment, he is not acting with the 25 intent required under 1512. I think that's the appropriate way

N8B8BANA

1 At the same time, the government announced that
2 Caroline Ellison and Gary Wang both had pleaded guilty in this
3 case and were cooperating with the government. Both formerly
4 were senior executives of one or both of the defendant's
5 companies, and perhaps others, and in the case of Ms. Ellison, 6 formerly had been in one or more intimate relationships with 7 the defendant.

8 Over the ensuing months, the better part of a year by 9 this time, the conditions of defendant's release have been 10 tightened, at least twice that I remember, and probably more
11 times, in response to government concerns that the defendant 12 ^{tampering} was or might tamper with witnesses or engage in other 13 troublesome conduct.

14 On July 20, the government again moved to tighten the 15 conditions of the defendant's release, at that time by limiting 16 extrajudicial statements by the parties and witnesses that were 17 likely to interfere with a fair trial. Its focus was largely 18 on the defendant's alleged leak of private materials of Ms.
19 Ellison to the New York Times.

20 Also, following some concessions by the defendant and 21 the receipt by the government of additional information,
22 basically relating to the frequency of the defendant's contacts
23 with media, but also others, the government, on the 26th of 24 July, orally moved to revoke the defendant's bail. Since then 25 I have received submissions by members of the media and from a

N8B8BANA

1 community." And I refer to 18 U.S.C. 3148(b) and the 2 LaFontaine case to which counsel have referred.

3 The government's position is that the record in this
4 case now establishes that there is probable cause to believe
5 that the defendant committed attempted witness tampering and/or 6 attempted obstruction of justice, either of which would be a
7 felony, and I am going to address witness tampering.

8 The relevant statute is 18 U.S.C., Section 1512(b),
9 which provides in substance, and in relevant part, that whoever
10 knowingly uses intimidation, threatens or corruptly persuades
11 another person, or attempts to do so, with intent to influence,
12 delay, or prevent the testimony of any person in an official
13 proceeding is guilty of a felony.

14 I have previously written, following the Second
15 Circuit's decision -- namely, LaFontaine -- that nonviolent
16 witness tampering and obstruction poses a danger to the 17 community and that the risk of such activities in an 18 appropriate case would support pretrial detention. Probable 19 cause exists when there is a practical probability that the 20 evidence supports a finding that the defendant has committed a 21 crime while on bail.

22 Now, let's look at the factual basis the government
23 relies on. On January 15, the defendant sent the general
24 counsel of FTX US, who has been referred to as Witness-1, the

*United States v. Stein, 2005 WL 815737, at *2
(S.D.N.Y. Nov. 14, 2005)*

N8B8BANA

1 medium: "Hey, I know it's been a whole while since we have
2 talked, and I know things have ended up on the wrong foot. I
3 would really love to reconnect and see if there is a way for us
4 to have a constructive relationship, use each other as 5 resources when possible, or at least vet things with each
6 other. I would love to get on a phone call sometime soon and 7 chat."

8 The defendant has proposed a quite benign reading of 9 that message. It's one I didn't share at the beginning, and I
10 don't share it now.

11 The message is addressed to Witness-1 and seeks 12 reconciliation of an apparently damaged personal relationship.

13 Now let's focus on the time period. The previous 14 communications, at least written communications, between Mr.
15 Bankman-Fried and Witness-1 had been before the disaster really
16 struck publicly, before the defendant was indicted, before Ms.
17 Ellison and Mr. Wang were known to be cooperating with the 18 government and pleading guilty. Witness-1 says in this January 19 ^{message} ~~email~~ - excuse me, Mr. Bankman-Fried says, "The 20 relationship was left in a bad place and we haven't talked for 21 quite a long time," suggesting that they hadn't been in contact
22 since before, to use a colloquial phrase, it all hit the fan.
23 And the message proposes that the defendant and Witness-1 "vet 24 things with each other."

25 Now, this isn't the time for a final after-trial

N8B8BANA

1 determination about what all of this meant. It's a time for
2 assessing probable cause. The message, in my opinion, in its 3 entirety seems to be an invitation for Witness-1 to get 4 together with Mr. Bankman-Fried so that ^{his} ~~their~~ views and 5 recollections ^{would be} ~~were~~ on the same page with the defendant's 6 version of events, and in that way make the relationship
7 between the two of them more constructive. In the past, I
8 referred to this as probably being an effort to have the two of 9 them sing out of the same hymn book for their mutual benefit,
10 and I rather suspect that as of January 15, with indictments of 11 some top people in the company already having come down, Mr.
12 Bankman-Fried was wondering whether Witness-1 was wondering
13 whether ^{Witness-1} ~~he~~ might be on the list in the future.

14 Now, Mr. Cohen, and I meant every good thing I said
15 when I had an exchange with him before, he's a wonderful lawyer
16 and he's doing a wonderful job, has a different view. He says,
17 when I reached that view, at the beginning of February, ^{that} I 18 didn't have the full ^{context} of these communications, which he 19 says show that this Signal message to Witness-1 was benign and 20 when you consider it all together, it doesn't support probable
21 cause. I don't agree with that.

22 Mr. Cohen submits evidence that Mr. Bankman-Fried and 23 Witness-1 exchanged messages in mid-November, but that was in a
24 different world. That was almost two months before this 25 January 15 message. While it may be true historically that the

N8B8BANA

1 first of these messages between the two individuals was made by

2 Witness-1, ^{that} ~~the first of the~~ messages happened long before the

3 time period ^{in which} ~~that~~ the January 15 message was written, and the

4 January 15 message, obviously, by its own terms, reinitiated

5 the communication between them, ^{that had been for some time}

6 So I don't buy the argument that it was Witness-1 who

7 reached out first to encourage the defendant to align his

8 efforts with Witness-1, except in one maybe narrow sense. It

9 was to everybody's interest, once Mr. Bankman-Fried had been

10 indicted, once the companies had gone bust, to support customer

11 assets and recover as much as could be recovered. That all

12 stood potentially to benefit everybody.

13 So the January 15 conversation, or overture, or

14 message, to be more precise, comes about in a radically

15 different context than the ones on which the defendant relies

16 as showing that I took this out of context. I didn't at all.

17 And it's his evidence that proves it.

18 There is no evidence before me of any communication

19 between Witness-1 and the defendant following the defendant's

20 arrest or even after mid-November until January 15.

21 The second point is this. The defense relies on the

22 fact that Mr. Bankman-Fried communicated with John Ray, who

23 once Mr. Bankman-Fried was out of these companies was the

24 receiver or liquidator, or whatever the magic term is under

N8B8BANA

1 Cromwell, which is representing the FTX debtors I believe.

2 Now, first of all, there is a vast difference between
3 John Ray and Sullivan & Cromwell, on the one hand, and 4 Witness-1 ^{on the other.} Witness-1 is a witness to the charged crimes.

5 Mr. Ray and Sullivan & Cromwell, so far as this record shows, 6 were not. The interest of Ray and Sullivan & Cromwell was to 7 marshal the assets. Mr. Bankman-Fried evidently thought 8 helping them do that, to the extent he might accomplish that, 9 would help him, but it wasn't because they were going to help
10 him as ^{Mr. Bankman-Fried} ~~a~~ witness ^{es} in this case.

11 Secondly, unlike Mr. Bankman-Fried's messages to 12 Mr. Ray and Sullivan & Cromwell, his messages ^{to} Witness-1
13 referred to Bankman-Fried, on the one hand, and Witness-1 14 "using each other as resources" and "vetting things with each
15 other." Nothing like that was said to Ray and Sullivan &
16 Cromwell. Those are things that are said between people with a
17 common interest in a litigation situation like this one.

18 Finally, in Mr. Bankman-Fried's messages to Mr. Ray,
19 he copied his attorneys. He did not copy any attorneys on the 20 message to Witness-1.

21 I can imagine that a jury conceivably might conclude 22 that the message to Witness-1 was not what it now appears to 23 have been. But in my mind there is a practical probability 24 that the message was an attempt to have Witness-1 and the 25 defendant, to use the phrase I used in February, sing out of

N8B8BANA

1 the same hymn book, and it was an attempt at witness tampering.

2 I come to the more recent event, which relates to the
4 Private Writings of Caroline Ellison, Star Witness in the FTX
5 case." The article quotes from personal diaries and other
6 private documents written by Ms. Ellison. They describe her
7 feelings and insecurities with respect to her work at Alameda
8 and her personal relationship with the defendant. The article
9 doesn't state the source or sources of the quoted materials,
10 the documents. It now is undisputed that the defendant spoke
11 to at least one of the New York Times authors many, many times
12 in the period preceding the publication, and on the virtual eve
13 of the publication of the article, entertained that reporter at 14 his parents' home in Palo Alto, California, and showed the 15 reporter allegedly a small portion of Ms. Ellison's private 16 writings. Those writings portrayed Ms. Ellison in an
17 unfavorable light. I don't know what else was shown. I don't 18 know what else was said. The defense has not proffered that.
19 The government has not either, presumably because they don't 20 have it.

21 Based on the government's public filings and 22 statements in court, it had been known widely, at least since
23 the defendant was presented in this court in November, months
24 before the Times article was published, that Ms. Ellison would 25 be an important witness at the defendant's trial. It is the

N8B8BANA

1 very well established principle that has been articulated in a
2 line of Supreme Court decisions going back to a case called 3 Giboney v. Empire Storage, ^{326 U.S. 490 (1949)} decided in the 30s. The Supreme 4 Court there said, "It has never been deemed an abridgment of 5 freedom of speech or press to make a course of conduct illegal 6 merely because the conduct was in part initiated, evidenced, or 7 carried out by means of language, either spoken, written or 8 printed." ^{id. at 503.} And lest anybody think I am relying on ancient legal 9 history from the last century, the Supreme Court repeated that 10 point within the last couple of weeks in United States v.
11 Hansen, in which it held that "speech intended to bring about a 12 particular unlawful act has no social value" and therefore "is 13 unprotected."

14 Thus, a defendant's speech is not protected to the 15 extent that it is intended to bring about a crime; where such 16 an intent is present, the speech becomes part of a crime. And 17 that's precisely why my hypothetical of two thugs going into a
18 grocery store and making the statement that I related to 19 counsel during the colloquy is a crime. The purpose of that is 20 to extort the grocery store. And the fact that the extortion
21 is carried out by spoken words and, indeed, no physical actions
22 other than being there, doesn't matter.

23 It's worth noting also that a defendant may be 24 convicted even of a specific intent crime as long as the

N8B8BANA

1 from it. We know he took notes because there are quotes in the
2 New York Times that are identical to the language in those
3 documents. It was a way, in his view, of doing this in a
4 manner in which he was least likely to be caught; not 5 impossible to be caught, least likely. He was covering his 6 tracks.

7 Also, the content of these documents in some respects
8 tends to support the conclusion they are extremely, in some 9 parts, personal and intimate. ^{those parts} They are relationship oriented, 10 not business, commercially or legally oriented, except -- and I 11 don't say that's universally true of the content, but it is 12 true of parts of the content -- they are something that someone 13 who has been in a relationship, or is in a relationship, would 14 be very unlikely to share with anybody, lest the New York 15 Times, except to hurt, discredit, and frighten the subject of 16 the material. Those views are not essential to my conclusion, 17 but I believe they tend to support it.

18 In view of the evidence, specifically the proffers
19 presented by both sides, ^{to the extent each is uncontradicted,} my conclusion is that there is 20 probable cause to believe that the defendant has attempted to 21 tamper with witnesses at least twice within the meaning of 18 22 U.S.C., Section 1512(b). I am speaking of Witness-1 and Ms.
23 Ellison.

24 Accordingly, under Section 3148, there is a rebuttal
25 presumption that no condition or combination of conditions will

N8B8BANA

1 assure that Mr. Bankman-Fried will not pose a danger to the 2 safety of any other person or his community if he remains at 3 liberty. It's well established in prior cases that the safety
4 of the community includes protecting the community against the 5 consequences of witness tampering.

6 Mr. Cohen admirably argues that the presumption has 7 been rebutted. I disagree. He has offered up a gag order on 8 all communications with the press.

9 Now, it's not, strictly speaking, exactly that broad,
10 but the problems are multiple with such a thing. I don't have 11 the text of the temporary order before me. Maybe, Andy, you
12 can put it on my computer screen. Here it is.

13 The temporary order that I signed on July 26, for one
14 thing, has a carve-out from media contacts for assertions of 15 innocence or references to information that is contained either
16 in publicly filed court filings or transcripts of court
17 proceedings in the case. So right away, even if the gag on 18 communications with the media were in effect, it doesn't really 19 stop all communications with the media. It leaves one fighting 20 about what are references to information contained in various 21 kinds of documents.

22 More broadly, the operative part, the first and most 23 significant part of the previous order, would prohibit him, if 24 I were to adopt this long-term, from communicating with any 25 public communications media anything about the case. In this

1 day and age, I don't know what public communications media are,
2 and I don't think anybody else does either. Is that anybody
3 who posts on Instagram? How about people who comment on the
4 Washington Post opinion pieces? It's arguably anybody who
5 wants to be included. Moreover, judging by the submissions I
6 have received from the media, even if I were to go along with 7 this despite the problems, I'd rather imagine we would be in 8 for collateral litigation of some moment. I don't think that 9 it's a workable solution longer term, particularly with someone 10 who has shown a willingness and desire to risk crossing the 11 line in an effort to get right up to it, no matter where the 12 line is.

13 It's certainly true, for example, that his use of the 14 VPN to watch a football game over an account ^{on which} ~~that~~ he wasn't 15 entitled to watch it ~~over~~ from the United States didn't violate 16 any of his bail conditions. It wasn't even a big deal in and 17 of itself, but there it is. He subscribed to this service from 18 the Bahamas, then used a VPN to log into it as if he were in 19 the Bahamas, when he was sitting in Palo Alto and could have 20 watched the game on public television. It says something about 21 the mindset. The means of sharing the documents with the New 22 York Times says to me something about the mindset. And I think
23 he has already, without violating any other bail condition,
24 save that he not commit another crime, has gone up to the line
25 over and over again.

1 would be permitted, as I understand it, to retain optical disks
2 and hard drives in his housing area and take them with him when
3 he goes to the laptops. I understand that these various 4 databases could be put on portable disks or drives. I am not
5 an expert on how long it would take. I imagine the necessary
6 software could be put on the laptop, but I'm not an expert on 7 that.

8 I am also aware that the trial date is coming before
9 too very long, and there is a remedy of last resort here if the 10 situation can't be worked out appropriately wherever he is 11 detained. And that is Section 3142(i) of the Bail Reform Act,
12 which provides in part: The judicial officer may by subsequent 13 order permit the temporary release of the person, i.e., the 14 defendant, in the custody of the United States marshal, or 15 another appropriate person, to the extent that judicial officer 16 determines such release to be necessary for preparation of the 17 person's defense or for another compelling reason.

18 Now, what that says to me is that, on an appropriate
19 showing, I could entertain -- I am not promising what I would 20 do with it, but I could entertain ^{an} application for Mr.
21 Bankman-Fried to spend time, possibly significant time as trial
22 approaches, in counsel's office, under supervision and under 23 appropriate safeguards, so that any problems with the 24 correctional situation could be avoided for significant periods
25 of time.
